Willow Valley Holds Trophy Judging Day

George Biron of Pincher Creek took the limelight at the Willow Valley Trophy Club Judging Day in Lundbreck, with the Bighorn Sheep he had entered.

The excellent herd scored a 196 7/8 and scored well up in the Boone and Crockett Club of New York world records. The trophy took the Trophy Day Challenge Shield for Bighorn Sheep but could not compete in the annual competition since Mr. Biron was not a member of the club before the sheep season opened.

Cold Snap Grips 'Pass In 'Old-Time' Winter

One of the longest cold snaps that has been endured for many years is being experienced in the Crownstest Pass and southern Alberta. Old timers describe the weather as "this is what the old winters used to be like."

The cold snap dipping down to over 40° below zero and hanging on for over a week has been accompanied by continuous snowfalls and strong north-east winds causing blizzard conditions almost every day. Department of highway snow removal crews and local town crews have been working around the clock to keep highways, streets and alleys open.

Town crews are presently confronted with the problem of running out of space to plough away the snow in alleys and consideration is being given to hauling away some of the snow so that fire lanes and other necessary lanes are kept open in case of an emergency.

A freak short spell of Chinook weather accompanied by rain just after the 40° below weather turned streets and roads into pure ice and this was followed by another snap of 40° below to solidify matters.

The cold weather has brought numerous cases of flu into the Crownstest Pass and although epidemic proportions have not yet been reached there are very few homes in the district that can claim to have escaped the flu bug completely.

Such keen interest was shown by the women and possible future cadets that it was decided to hold competition in these classes when the Cadet Corps holds its Easter Ham Shoot presently being planned.

The Corps has extended thanks to Phillips Cable Plant entertainment committee who provided a donation of refreshments for the Cadets and contestants.

Report From Parliament Hill

In the rush to expediate agreement for bringing about the changes in the procedures of Parliament, several very important points were allowed to pass without sufficient attention.

It will be recalled that on Dec. 20th, the Government and the Opposition compromised to end the debate on changes and procedures which debate might have dragged on into the holiday season. The bulk of observants of Parliament are agreed that the changes will lead to more efficiency in Parliament.

In the debate leading to the compromise, the Opposition charged that one section of the proposed new rules, clause 16A, would undermine Parliament and lead to the Prime Minister or the Government House Leader becoming a dictator.

Rule 16A provided for a procedure for allotting the time of Parliament. Without such a provision debate could drag on interminably as in the flag debate. Under the system which would have applied if Rule 16A were adopted, the House Leaders of all Parties would meet to decide on the allotment of time. In the event of disagreement, the Government House Leader would be able to decide on his own. Any provision which would not allow the Government House Leader to maintain a significant degree of control over decisions of the meetings of the House Leaders would in effect negate the Party system of Government.

The first point which emerges from the foregoing is that the House Leader would be able to allot time on his own only in the event of disagreement among the House Leaders. Sufficient emphasis has not been placed on the fact that only in the event of disagreement among the House Leaders would the Government House Leader assume any additional power.

The second fact which was not conveyed was that the new rules, including 16A, were not drafted by the Government but by a committee made up of all parties in Parliament. For this reason the charge that the Government was attempting some evil deed was unwarranted.

The charge of dictatorship was intended by the Opposition to attract attention of the public to the rules debate. It had not the intended effect. It is not likely that those who leveled the charge believe in it. For if a simple change in one rule could undo the evolutionary process of Parliament which had proceeded for 700 years, then our democracy is on a very thin footing and Parliament had better take a very serious look at itself.

Foster Parents To Be Honored

Alberta foster parents of five years' standing or longer are to be honored in a series of ceremonies throughout the province in the next few weeks. The Minister of Public Welfare, the Hon. Ray Speaker, is to attend as many of the ceremonies as possible to say "thank you" to foster parents on behalf of the entire community.

Over 600 of Alberta's 5,000 foster parents will be presented with certificates of service for over five, 10 and 15 years. About 300 are in Edmonton, 175 in Calgary, 20 in Lethbridge and in Wetaskiwin, 15 in Camrose, Medicine Hat and Red Deer. In other centres, there are between 10 and 15 foster parents who will receive certificates.

The certificates acknowledge each couple's contribution to the social well-being of the community by looking after the unfortunate children who lose their parents temporarily or permanently. At each ceremony, recognition will be made by a speaker of the significant role that foster parents play in the community. Members of the public are welcome to attend the event in their area.

The minister will attend ceremonies in Edmonton, Calgary, Wetaskiwin, Camrose, Red Deer and Lethbridge. Departmental officials will officiate at other centres.

Does your organization need a shot in the arm? I challenge you women who are involved in clubs or organizations of one kind or another to ask this question of your group and answer it truthfully. I think that in most cases the answer will be a definite YES! In my work and travels about the district, I've attended a good number of meetings of women's organizations and with few exceptions, this is the one most obvious fact.

Ways to Improve Your Organization: With the arrival of the New Year, most organizations have elected their new executive. Their first duty should be to review:

1 Why does the organization exist? In most cases, it exists because there was a common need among a group of people to fulfill this need, an organization was formed. However, does this need still exist; or has it been fulfilled through the organization? If the latter be the case, do yourselves a favor and disband. Why drag on with ill-attended meetings and apathetic members? Once the need has been satisfied, interest will quickly dissipate. One solution to this problem is to find another common need among members that should be satisfied and alter your organization to accomplish that desired end.

2 Study why you are not attracting younger women. If your group was formed 10 to 20 years ago, do you still follow the same procedure week in, and week out, month in, month out. Adapt to the times and the existing common needs among the members. Set definite aims and pertinent objectives. Perhaps then you'll draw in younger members to keep your organization alive.

3 Advise: Re-acquaint the community as well as your group with the organization.

4 Spend more time on the essentials of the organization.

5 Work together with other organizations for the common good of the community.

6 Make your organization more aware of the needs of the community and districts around it.

7 Review books and magazines which may help in any phase of club work.

8 Change the structure of the organization if necessary, so that finances aren't such a burden.

At your next meeting, review some of these suggestions and take a long hard look at your organization. The good of improving your organization may then be achieved.

Low Blood Pressure

Many people mistakenly think low blood pressure and a low blood count are one and the same. Low blood pressure and low blood count are two entirely different conditions, says The Canadian Medical Association.

Low blood count generally denotes a lower than normal hemoglobin content or oxygen-carrying capacity of the blood; in other words anemia. This is always a symptom of some underlying disorder and requires careful investigation to determine its exact cause.

Low blood pressure describes the situation in which a patient's blood pressure—the force at which the blood is being pumped through the blood vessels—is lower than one would expect—when compared to others of the same age group. (The term is also used in conditions of shock or hemorrhage where the low blood pressure is present and represents the body's reaction to the specific causes).

The CMA says it is unwise and unfair to tell a person who feels well and has no specific symptom that he has low blood pressure—simply because this was detected during a routine medical examination. Such a person is probably better off in the long run than the person with a blood pressure that is considered normal.

One symptom that is related to so-called low blood pressure is dizziness, due to postural hypertension. The patient usually has a sense of dizziness, particularly on suddenly changing position from lying to sitting or standing. This is really of no great significance, and can be eliminated completely by changing positions more slowly.

... a government match-maker?

Unlike most match-makers, Kay Ritchie's clients are not prospective bride and groom but parents and child. She is one of the 350 social workers who match prospective parents with adoptable children under the care of the Child Welfare Branch, Alberta Department of Welfare. In so doing, Kay and her colleagues not only make sure that the youngster is acceptable to the adopters, but also that that couple is suitable for the child. In addition to processing hundreds of adoptions each year, the Child Welfare Branch also offers protection to children against neglect or abuse, locates foster homes for wards of the crown, and supervises institutions which house those children who have not found a permanent or foster home.

Terry McAtee has a unique product, the industrial potential of Alberta, which he promotes through the pages of the "Alberta Opportunities Bulletin". This publication informs business men all over the world of distributing and manufacturing openings in our province. The Bulletin is one of the many involved by the Industrial Development Branch of the Alberta Department of Industry and Tourism to encourage growth in Alberta's primary and secondary industries. The Branch also assists businessmen in measuring the value of the province's potential by providing information on markets, industrial location factors, raw materials and financing. Key areas outside Alberta are given on-the-spot assistance through Industrial Development offices in Montreal and Los Angeles.

have you ever met...... a psychologist who is an art critic?

Psychologist Sonia Maschuk lauds the earnest artistic efforts of a young patient, a small but important aspect of the rehabilitation of emotionally disturbed children, at the Edmonton Guidance Clinic. The Department of Health, through the Division of Mental Health, maintains such clinics in Calgary, Red Deer and Lethbridge, plus sub-offices in Grande Prairie and Medicine Hat and regular travelling clinics serving rural and northern areas. Three allied professional groups work together in these clinics: Child Psychologists, Social Workers and Clinical Psychologists make a complete service of diagnosis, consultation and treatment available in each centre. This is a free service provided to children of all ages and young people up to twenty years of age who are still in school or under direct parental supervision.

... a man who plays "father" to 200 boys?

The 200 occupants of the men's residence at the Alberta Agricultural and Vocational College in Olds look to Dean of Residence R. P. Warrington for many things. He listens to their troubles, dispenses advice and counsel, provides a link between the student body and faculty, and, in general, maintains harmony amongst those students "living in". Dean Warrington and his counterparts at the other two colleges in Vermilion and Fairview, are essential factors in a service which works to assure the future of Agriculture in Alberta. Operated by the Extension Division, Alberta Department of Agriculture, The Agriculture and Vocational Colleges provide all young Albertans with the opportunity to learn the skills and knowledge required for a career in farming or related occupations, as well as courses in business and high school academic subjects.

IN MEMORIAM

RAYMOND—In loving memory of my dear wife, Ethel Raymond, who passed away January 29, 1968.

The face I love is missing,
The voice I love is stilled,
A place is vacant in my heart,
That never can be filled.
Such pain she bore so patiently,
For quite a weary while,
She kept her sweetness to the end,
With a brave and loving smile.
And when God took her to Himself,
And hushed her heart to sleep,
So peaceful was her loving face,
It seemed a shame to weep.
Take care of her as she takes her rest,
For on earth to me she was the best.
—Ever remembered by her loving husband Isidore, her daughter Esther Ash and her son W. Raymond, Blairmore.

Coho Salmon For Alberta

Hon. H. A. Ruste, Minister of Alberta Department of Lands and Forests, has received confirmation from Urban C. Nelson, Commissioner for the Alaska Department of Fish and Game, that his State has authorized a gift of one hundred thousand Coho Salmon eggs to the Province of Alberta.

The salmon eggs will arrive by air in Calgary on Jan. 10th and delivered to the Fish and Wildlife Division's Fish Hatchery.

The eggs will be reared to fingerling size and planted in Cold Lake, approximately 150 miles northeast of Edmonton, sometime next summer.

The eggs are expected to hatch on or about Feb. 1st.

This marks the first time that Coho Salmon, a native to salt water will have been introduced into Alberta's fresh water.

The State of Michigan is the only other area in North America that has attempted to carry out such plantings on a large scale in fresh water.

The department's fisheries biologists expect that the fish will reach the 10 to 14 pound stage at the end of their second year following planting. Similar introductions into Lake Michigan resulted in a 18-20 pound fish during the same period of time.

The biologists are presently studying other lakes in the province for additional Coho plantings.

It is believed that the plantings will also help to stimulate additional tourism to the area.

Roots or other organic material under the ground may burn slowly and cause fires to persist during heavy rains or travel under the earth for considerable distances.
